

---

Young Woman Seated in an Interior, Reading a Letter

Gabriel Metsu
(Leiden 1629 – 1667 Amsterdam)

ca. 1658–61
oil on panel
25.8 x 21 cm
GM-103

---

How To Cite

Adriaan Waiboer, "Young Woman Seated in an Interior, Reading a Letter", (GM-103), in The Leiden Collection Catalogue, Arthur K. Wheelock Jr., Ed., New York, 2017

<http://www.theleidencollection.com/archive/>

This page is available on the site's Archive. PDF of every version of this page is available on the Archive, and the Archive is managed by a permanent URL. Archival copies will never be deleted. New versions are added only when a substantive change to the narrative occurs.

---

Gabriel Metsu was a master at rendering the sense of expectation and anticipation that occurs when one reads a letter from a loved one. Here, a young woman, sitting demurely near her sewing basket and with a sewing cushion on her lap, looks down to read the letter that has arrived while she was diligently engaged in her needlework. The scene is quiet and still, with the only semblance of movement being the slight smile that crosses her face as she reads her lover's missive. Although not privy to the text, the viewer is a silent witness to this tender and private moment.

Metsu, who was always keen to respond to contemporary trends in Dutch genre painting, was an avid painter of scenes of amorous correspondence, a popular theme for artists painting during the third quarter of the seventeenth century. The appeal of these works reflects the important role of letter writing in the Netherlands. The ability to compose eloquent messages was an indication of civility and education, even if the writer made use of the letter-writing manuals that were widely available in the Dutch Republic.<sup>[1]</sup> The subject allowed artists to create engaging images of men and women either reading a billet-doux from a lover or searching for words to express their own feelings on paper.

Metsu made no fewer than nine images of men or women reading or writing love letters from the late 1650s to the mid-1660s.<sup>[2]</sup> Young Woman Seated in an Interior, Reading a Letter is the earliest of the three representations of a female letter reader he made during this period. He executed it around 1658–61, just as he began shifting his attention from working maids to elegant women engaged in leisurely pastimes.<sup>[3]</sup> The young woman's clothes, earrings and silver ear picker (an ornamented tool to clean the ear canal) hanging on a chain attached to a blue velvet purse clearly associate her with the middle class.

Metsu's approach to this subject owes much to the paintings of pensive women writing and reading letters that Gerard ter Borch (1617–81) made in the mid-1650s. Indeed, Ter Borch may be credited with inspiring not only Metsu's interest in depicting the theme of amorous correspondence, but also that of Pieter de Hooch (1629–84), Frans van Mieris (1635–81), Johannes Vermeer (1632–75), and Caspar Netscher (ca. 1639–84).

Fig 1. Gerard ter Borch, A Woman Writing a Letter, ca. 1655–66, oil on panel, 39 x 29.5 cm, Mauritshuis, The Hague, 797

Fig 2. Gerard ter Borch, A Woman with a Wine Glass Reading a Letter, ca. 1656–57, oil on canvas, 37.5 x 28.7 cm, Städel Museum, Frankfurt am Main, 1055

Two of Ter Borch's paintings in particular, A Woman Writing a Letter from ca. 1655–56 (fig 1) and A Woman with a Wine Glass Reading a Letter (fig 2) from about one to two years later, seem to have inspired Metsu when making this work.<sup>[4]</sup> Ter Borch situated the women in these paintings seated close to the picture plane and placed them against a dark background. Metsu freely adapted these compositional features in making this painting, but in doing so he created an image more tranquil and intimate than those created by Ter Borch, partly by painting his scene in a smaller format and placing his figure nearer the front of the picture plane. Whereas Ter Borch incorporated two to three areas of color to enliven his scenes—the women's clothes, the carpets on the tables, and the upholstery of a chair—Metsu limited his bright color—the red of the bodice—to the woman herself.<sup>[5]</sup>

Ter Borch often used his half-sister Gesina (1631–90) as a model for his genre scenes and, in a similar fashion, Metsu frequently painted his own wife, Isabella de Wolff, in domestic roles, as he did here. Though Metsu did not portray her accurately in all of these scenes, her facial features are generally recognizable even if her appearance varies from one work to the next.<sup>[6]</sup> When Metsu painted this work, Isabella had been his wife only briefly: the couple had married in Enkhuizen in May 1658. Isabella was the daughter of Wouter Coenraetsz de Wolff and Maria de Grebber (1602–80), one of Holland's few female artists.<sup>[7]</sup>

-Adriaan Waiboer

Endnotes

1. Peter C. Sutton, "Love Letters: Dutch Genre Painting in the Age of Vermeer," in Love Letters: Dutch Genre Paintings in the Age of Vermeer, ed. Peter C. Sutton (Exh. cat. Dublin, National Gallery of Ireland; Greenwich, Conn., Bruce Museum of Arts and Sciences) (New Haven, 2003), 34–35.
2. Adriaan E. Waiboer, Gabriel Metsu, Life and Work: A Catalogue Raisonné (New Haven and London, 2012), 203–4, no. A-60; 214–17, nos. A-71, A-72, A-73; 230, no. A-88; 250, no. A-108; 255–58, nos. A-116, A-117; 282–83, no. B-14, all ill.
3. For Metsu's two other paintings of a woman reading a letter, see Adriaan E. Waiboer, Gabriel Metsu, Life and Work: A Catalogue Raisonné (New Haven and London, 2012), 257–58, no. A-117; 282–83, no. B-14, both ill.

4. Metsu certainly knew Ter Borch's A Woman Writing a Letter, as he used it as his departure point for A Woman Drawing of 1657–59.
5. This type of red was Metsu's favorite color, and it appears in the majority of his works, often as a visual accent against a light- or dark-brownish background (see, for example, GM-101).
6. Adriaan E. Waiboer, Gabriel Metsu, Life and Work: A Catalogue Raisonné (New Haven and London, 2012), 58–59. There are paintings, such as A Woman Sewing, with a Parrot (see ibid., 240, no. A-107, ill.), in which Isabella de Wolff's identity as a model cannot be confirmed with certainty.
7. Irene van Thiel-Stroman, "Maria de Grebber," in Judith Leyster: A Dutch Master and Her World, ed. James A. Welu and Pieter Biesboer (Exh. cat. Haarlem, Frans Hals Museum; Worcester, Mass., Worcester Art Museum) (Zwolle and Worcester, 1993), 228–29; see also Adriaan E. Waiboer, Gabriel Metsu, Life and Work: A Catalogue Raisonné (New Haven and London, 2012), 8–9.

Provenance

- (Possible sale, Christie's, London, 23 February 1798, no. 59 [for £8.18]).
- Private collection by 1935.
- A. R. Ball, New York, by 1944.
- Mrs. Charles E. Dunlap, New York (her sale, Sotheby's Parke Bernet, New York, 4 December 1975, no. 303).
- Possibly W. W. Blake (sale, Sotheby's, London, 6 July 1983, no. 84 [to Dreesman]).
- Dr. Anton C. R. Dreesmann (1923–2000), Amsterdam, by 1983 (his sale, Christie's, London, 11 April 2002, no. 555 [to Ambassador John William Middendorf II]).
- Ambassador John William Middendorf II (b. 1924), by 2002 [Johnny van Haften, Ltd., London, 2004].
- From whom acquired by the present owner in 2006.

Exhibition History

- Montreal, Art Association of Montreal, "Loan Exhibition of Great Paintings: Five Centuries of Dutch Art," 9 March–9 April 1944, no. 77 [lent by A. R. Ball].
- Amsterdam, Gebr. Douwes Fine Art, "Selling Exhibition of Old Master Paintings of the 17th, 18th and Early 19th Century," 27 November–22 December 1995; 3–19 January 1996, no. 26 [lent by Dr. Anton C. R. Dreesman].
- Dublin, National Gallery of Ireland, "Love Letters: Dutch Genre Paintings in the Age of Vermeer," 1 October–31 December 2003; Greenwich, Conn., Bruce Museum of Art and Science, 31 January–2 May 2004, no. 15 [lent by Ambassador John William Middendorf II].
- San Diego, Timken Museum of Art, "Gabriel Metsu: The Love Letter," 1 May–29 August 2004 [no number].
- Maastricht, European Fine Arts Fair, March 2005 and March 2006 [exhibited by Johnny van Haeften, Ltd.].
- Raleigh, North Carolina Museum of Art, "Small Treasures: Rembrandt, Hals, and Their Contemporaries," 12 October 2014–4 January 2015; Birmingham, Birmingham Museum of Art, 1 February–26 April 2015, no. 21 [lent by the present owner].

References

- Loan Exhibition of Great Paintings: Five Centuries of Dutch Art. Exh. cat. Montreal, Art Association of Montreal. Montreal, 1944, 44, no. 77.
- Robinson, Franklin, W. Gabriel Metsu (1629–1667): A Study of His Place in Dutch Genre Painting of the Golden Age. New York, 1974, 49, fig. 118.
- Bénézit, E. Dictionnaire critique et documentaire des peintres, sculpteurs, dessinateurs et graveurs de tous les temps et de tous les pays par un groupe d'écrivains spécialistes français et étrangers. 10 vols. Paris, 1976. Revised ed. by Jacques Busse, Paris, 1999, 9:537.
- Selling Exhibition of Old Master Paintings of the 17th, 18th and Early 19th Century. Exh. cat. Amsterdam, Gebr. Douwes Fine Art. Amsterdam, 1995–96, no. 29.
- Kolks, Z. "Veilingverslag oude schilderijen (IV)." Kunst & antiekrevue 18, no. 10 (2002): 23, fig. 13.
- Sutton, Peter, ed. Love Letters: Dutch Genre Painting in the Age of Vermeer. Exh. cat.

Dublin, National Gallery of Ireland; Greenwich, Conn., Bruce Museum of Arts and Sciences. New Haven, 2003, 120–23, no. 15.

- Waiboer, Adriaan E. “Gabriel Metsu (1629–1667): Life and Work.” 4 vols. Ph.D. diss. New York University, 2007, 1:195, 684–86, no. A-105, 4: 1154.
- Waiboer, Adriaan E. Gabriel Metsu, Life and Work: A Catalogue Raisonné. New Haven and London, 2012, 96, 230, no. A-88.
- Weller, Dennis P. Small Treasures: Rembrandt, Hals, and Their Contemporaries. Exh. cat. Raleigh, North Carolina Museum of Art; Birmingham, Birmingham Museum of Art. Raleigh, 2014, 126–29, no. 21.

Technical Summary

The support, a single plank of vertically grained, vertically oriented, rectangular non-Baltic oak, has bevels on all four sides.<sup>[1]</sup> The panel is unthinned and uncradled, and has vertically oriented hand toolmarks across the panel width and machine toolmarks along the left edge. There are three red wax collection seals, three import stamps, a stencil and a collector’s label, but no panel maker’s mark.

A light-colored ground has been thinly and evenly applied followed by a thin, light gray underlayer.<sup>[2]</sup> The paint along the background has been applied in transparent glazes allowing the underlayer to show through, and the gray-blue wall color to the figure’s right is beaded up where it meets the figure’s wrist and forearm. The paint along the figure has been applied in successive thin layers with low brushmarkings light over dark. In raking light, the outer contours of the figure are slightly raised.

No underdrawing or compositional changes are readily apparent in infrared images captured at 780–1000 nanometers or in the X-radiograph.

The painting is unsigned and undated.

The painting has not undergone conservation treatment since its acquisition in 2006 and remains in a good state of preservation.

-Annette Rupprecht