

Pendant Portraits of an Elegant Couple, 1708: Portrait of an Elegant Woman

Willem van Mieris
(Leiden 1662 – 1747 Leiden)

1708

oil on oval panel

19.5 x 15 cm

signed and dated in dark paint, lower right quadrant: “W. V. Mieris. Fe= Anno. 1708.”

WM-103.b

How To Cite

Junko Aono, "Pendant Portraits of an Elegant Couple, 1708", in The Leiden Collection Catalogue, Arthur K. Wheelock Jr., Ed., New York, 2017

<http://www.theleidencollection.com/archive/>

This page is available on the site's Archive. PDF of every version of this page is available on the Archive, and the Archive is managed by a permanent URL. Archival copies will never be deleted. New versions are added only when a substantive change to the narrative occurs.

The couple in these two oval portraits represents the height of fashion in the early eighteenth century, both elegant and refined. The man wears a stylish long wig, a white blouse and a brown jacket with a golden buckle, and he has gracefully draped a gray velvet mantle around his body. Holding his right hand before his chest, he looks affectionately toward his wife. She responds to her husband's gaze by turning her head slightly in his direction, though she looks directly at the viewer. She wears a white blouse and a green satin dress adorned with a golden fringe and jewelry, and she gently holds a golden-brown shawl to cover her left shoulder. Her dark brown hair is elegantly coiffured, with a long, flowing lock falling over her right shoulder onto her décolleté, a style of dress derived from French fashions that had transformed the wardrobes of wealthy citizens in the Dutch Republic by the early eighteenth century.

Although the identity of the couple remains unknown, the pair clearly belonged to the affluent elite who were able to commission portraits from Willem van Mieris, an artist who had already established an outstanding reputation for himself.^[1] Van Mieris had excelled in portrait painting from the earliest years of his career, representing stolid Dutch burghers in their domestic environments, as in his pendant portraits purported to represent Samuel van Acker and his wife (WM-106.a-b), but over time his style evolved to a more flowing manner to reflect the changing social and cultural character of the Netherlands. In the small bust-length pendant portraits discussed here, Van Mieris depicted his sitters in an oval format, thereby focusing his entire attention on the figures and their elegant appearance. His refined painterly technique is particularly evident in the minute rendering of textures, such as the soft curled hair, the pleats of the thin white blouse, the beautifully draped shawls, and the golden jewelry with precious stones. The sitters' elegant poses and gestures, characteristic of this master at this period of his career, reflect the period's dominant classicizing style.

Fig 1. Wax seal wax of a monogram consisting of the letters C, V, and L, affixed to the reverse of the female portrait of WM-103.b

This type of portrait pair usually hung together with images of relatives and ancestors, as was the case with two oval portraits that Van Mieris made for his patron Allard de la Court and his wife, Catharina Backer. Those pendants hung together with 26 other family portraits in the dining room of the couple's home.^[2] Such portraits were sometimes inherited by descendants and remained within the family, but many were dispersed over the centuries and can no longer be identified with known sitters, a fate also shared by the present works.

Provenance research has recently clarified the complete history of their ownership since the nineteenth century. The red wax seals affixed to the back of both panels, which contain a monogram consisting of the letters C, V, and L (fig 1), have been identified with the collector Christophe van Loo from Ghent. He purchased both portraits at the auction of the collection of Count Philippe Vilain XIII of Brussels, held in Paris in 1857, and they were later sold at the Van Loo sale in Paris in 1881.^[3] Remarkably, the auction catalogues of 1857 and 1881 describe the couple as Willem van Mieris and his wife. This identification, however, is far from convincing. The couple hardly looks old enough to be 46 and 45 years old, respectively, the ages of the artist and his wife in 1708, the year these portraits were painted.^[4]

-Junko Aono

Endnotes

1. Van Mieris, for instance, made several portraits of the De la Court family, as Pieter de la Court van der Voort was his art patron and gave him numerous commissions. A pair of portraits of this benefactor and his wife is said to date to 1708, and the portrait of his son Allard de la Court, mentioned in the current entry, was made in 1705; see C. Willemijn Fock and R. E. O. Ekkart, "De portretgalerij van de familie De la Court," Jaarboek Centraal Bureau voor Genealogie 35 (1981): 179, 181, 201, no. 17, 203, no. 21, 204, figs. 15 and 16, 205, no. 23, 206, fig. 19.
2. See note 1 and T. H. Lunsingh Scheurleer, ed., Het Rapenburg: Geschiedenis van een Leidse gracht, 6 vols. and index (Leiden, 1986–92), 2:457–58. The collection of Jhr. De la Court, sold on 21 September 1904, contained "portraits en buste de Pieter de la Court et de sa femme Sara Poelaert" (lot no. 104, copper, oval, 10.5 cm high). Hofstede de Groot identified this portrait of Sara Poelaert with the one mentioned by Moes under no. 359. This pair of portraits was also found in the eighteenth-century inventories of the De la Court family, but these two paintings cannot be identified with WM-103.a–b, since the sizes of WM-103.a–b are much larger and the supports are panel, not copper. Ernst Wilhelm Moes, Iconographia Batava: Beredeneerde lijst van geschilderde en gebeeldhouwde portretten van Noord-Nederlanders in vorige eeuwen, 2 vols. (Amsterdam, 1905), 2:219, no. 5971; Hofstede de Groot, A Catalogue Raisonné of the Works of the Most Eminent Dutch Painters of the Seventeenth Century Based on the Work of John Smith, 8 vols. (London, 1907–27), translated from Beschreibendes und kritisches Verzeichnis der Werke der hervorragendsten holländischen Maler des XVII. Jahrhunderts, 10 vols. (Esslingen and Paris, 1907–28), 10:199, nos. 358, 359.

3. Sale, Count Philippe Vilain XIII, Paris, 2 May 1857, nos. 43, 44 [760 and 850 francs, respectively, to Van Loo]; sale, Christophe van Loo, Paris, 25 May 1881, nos. 15, 16 [1,920 and 1,600 francs, respectively, to F. Hérard].
4. Van Mieris's wife, Agneta Chapman, was born in 1663 and died in 1744. For a pair of drawn portraits of this couple, possibly made upon the occasion of their marriage in 1684, see Albert J. Elen, "Willem van Mieris and His First Model: Agneta Chapman as the Morgan Flora," Master Drawings 47 (2009): 465, figs. 2–3.

Provenance

- Count Philippe Vilain XIII, Brussels (his sale, Paris, 2 May 1857, nos. 43, 44 [respectively 760 and 850 francs to Van Loo]).
- Christophe van Loo, Ghent (his sale, Paris, 25 May 1881, nos. 15, 16 [respectively 1,920 and 1,600 francs to F. Hérard]).
- Flury Hérard (his sale, Paris, 18 November 1919, nos. 55, 56).
- Monsieur G... (his sale, Drouot, Paris, 8 February 1939, nos. 47, 48).
- Private collection, Paris; and by descent (sale, Christie's, Paris, 22 June 2005, no. 42 [to Salomon Lilian B.V., Amsterdam]).
- From whom acquired by the present owner in 2005.

References

- Hofstede de Groot, Cornelis. Beschreibendes und kritisches Verzeichnis der Werke der hervorragendsten holländischen Maler des XVII. Jahrhunderts. 10 vols. Esslingen and Paris, 1907–28, 10:197, nos. 347 and 348.

Technical Summary

The support, a single plank of vertically grained, oval-shaped, non-Baltic oak, has a wide horizontal bevel across the midpoint of the lower edge, a vertical bevel along the right edge, and short bevels that form facets along the remainder of the oval.^[1] The unthinned and uncradled panel has a brown radio-opaque coating that obscures the reverse, although there do not appear to be machine tool marks. There are no import stamps or panel maker's marks, but there is one red wax seal with a "CVL" monogram within an oval, presumably that of Count Philippe Vilain XIII, which is identical to one of the two red wax seals on the companion portrait of a man WM-103.a.^[2]

A light-colored ground has been thinly and evenly applied followed by a warm brown underlayer not present in the pendant portrait WM-103.a. The underlayer remains exposed along the panel edges and where the figure's proper left shoulder meets the background, to the left of the signature. The paint has been applied smoothly in successive thin layers of transparent glazing, with slightly raised contours along the figure's facial features and hands and the drapery folds.

No underdrawing or compositional changes are readily apparent in infrared images captured at 780–1000 nanometers.

The painting is signed and dated in dark paint along the lower right quadrant.

The painting has not undergone conservation treatment since its acquisition and remains in a good state of preservation.

-Annette Rupprecht