

THE LEIDEN
COLLECTION

Young Girl in a Gold-Trimmed Cloak

Rembrandt van Rijn
(Leiden 1606 – 1669 Amsterdam)

1632

oil on oval panel

59 x 44 cm

signed and dated in dark paint along the background, center right: "RHL van Rijn / 1632"

RR-104

Currently on view at: The National Museum of China, Beijing

How To Cite

Manuth, Volker. "Young Girl in a Gold-Trimmed Cloak." In The Leiden Collection Catalogue. Edited by Arthur K. Wheelock Jr. New York, 2017.

<https://www.theleidencollection.com/archive/>.

This page is available on the site's Archive. PDF of every version of this page is available on the Archive, and the Archive is managed by a permanent URL. Archival copies will never be deleted. New versions are added only when a substantive change to the narrative occurs.

One of the miracles of Rembrandt van Rijn's paintings of individuals is that the expressions of his sitters never seem frozen. Even their personalities seem to evolve as one interacts with their gazes. These qualities are particularly evident in this charming depiction of an elegantly robed young girl with curly, somewhat frizzy blond hair. Although she stares directly at the viewer from the center of this oval panel, the slight twist of her body, with one shoulder higher than the other, helps soften her formal appearance. Light falling from the upper left also enlivens her presence by picking up nuances of her features, including her pronounced forehead, her somewhat asymmetrical eyes, the slight pout of her mouth, and the beginnings of a double chin. The shaded right side of her face, moreover, seems to recede more deeply into space than her lit side, a subtle difference in structure that adds character to her face. Even the color shifts in the ocher background, as Rembrandt plays with light against dark and dark against light, help create the sense that she is a living and breathing individual with a personality far more lively than first intimated by her restrained pose.

Rembrandt enhanced the pictorial character of the image with his distinctive painting techniques. He modeled the girl's flesh tones with smoothly blended strokes, and rendered her blond hair with flowing, individual touches of the brush. He vigorously applied heavily laden paint to create the pattern of radial pleats of the white blouse, whereas he picked out the decorative motifs of the gold embroidery on her black gown with thick highlights. Finally, Rembrandt's carefully placed accents lend weight and substance to the strand of pearls in her hair and the single pearl hanging from her right ear.

Rembrandt painted Young Girl in a Gold-Trimmed Cloak in 1632, soon after he moved from Leiden to Amsterdam, at a time when his portraits and tronies (imaginative character studies of individual figures) were in great demand.^[1] It is oftentimes difficult to tell the difference between these two types of paintings, as Rembrandt infused both with personal characterizations that seem distinctive and reflective of a specific individual. This issue is particularly relevant for Young Girl in a Gold-Trimmed Cloak, which has often been identified as a portrait but should instead be considered a tronie.

The sitter is most frequently identified as Saskia van Uylenburgh,

Comparative Figures

Fig 1. Rembrandt van Rijn, Portrait of Saskia van Uylenburgh, 1633, silverpoint on vellum, 185 x 107 mm, Kupferstichkabinett der Staatlichen Museen zu Berlin, inv. KdZ 1152, © Foto: Kupferstichkabinett der Staatlichen Museen zu Berlin – Preußischer Kulturbesitz, Fotograf/in: Jörg P. Anders

Fig 2. Rembrandt van Rijn, A Young Woman in Profile with a Fan, 1632, oil on canvas, 72 x 55 cm, Nationalmuseum, Stockholm, inv. NM 583, photo: Erik Cornelius / Nationalmuseum

Rembrandt's first wife.^[2] However, Rembrandt and Saskia probably did not meet until a year after this painting was executed.^[3] Moreover, a comparison of the sitter in this painting and the silverpoint drawing Rembrandt made of Saskia in Friesland in 1633 on the occasion of their engagement (fig 1) reveals clear differences. The girl in the Leiden Collection painting, for instance, has a more rounded head and more childlike features. Another proposed identification for the sitter is Rembrandt's younger sister Elisabeth (Lysbeth).^[4] However, Rembrandt executed this painting in Amsterdam and Lysbeth apparently spent her whole life in Leiden, where she was buried in the Pieterskerk in 1655.^[5]

It is highly unlikely, indeed, that Rembrandt has here painted a formal portrait of a specific individual, family member or not.^[6] Even apart from the problems inherent in the above proposed identifications, there is the issue of the figure's dress. Her outfit, with its high-necked, pleated, white blouse and dark cloak edged with gold embroidery, as well as the string of pearls in her hair and her pearl ear drops, harkens back to elegant sixteenth-century fashions.^[7] Such imaginative, fanciful outfits are characteristic of the tronies that Rembrandt and Jan Lievens (1607–74) depicted in Leiden during the late 1620s and early 1630s. These paintings, which came in different sizes and different degrees of finish, included depictions of young girls, wrinkled graybeards, weathered soldiers, and exotic potentates. They were made, in part, in preparation for history paintings, but also as works to be sold on the open market.

The same model appears in two other paintings that Rembrandt executed in 1632: A Young Woman in Profile with a Fan in Stockholm (fig 2) and Bust of a Young Woman in a Cap in a private collection in Switzerland.^[8] In the Stockholm painting she is shown in strict profile to the left and wears similar clothing and pearl jewelry.^[9] In the other painting, likewise signed and dated 1632, she wears a plumed beret.^[10] A fourth painting depicting the same model, Bust of a Young Woman in Chapel Hill (fig 3), was executed by one of Rembrandt's studio assistants, probably Isaac de Jouderville (ca. 1612–48).^[11] The presence of these four paintings featuring the same model by Rembrandt, and his workshop makes it highly unlikely that Young Girl in a Gold-Trimmed Cloak was a commissioned portrait. Interestingly, the same model, in a nearly identical costume, appears in two of Rembrandt's history paintings from the early 1630s: as Europa in The Rape of Europa, in the J. Paul Getty Museum,

Fig 3. Isaac de Jouderville / Circle of Rembrandt van Rijn, Bust of a Young Woman, 1632, oil on panel, 59.4 x 43.2 cm (oval), Morehead Planetarium and Science Center, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N.C. Image courtesy of the North Carolina Museum of Art, Raleigh, N.C.

Fig 4. Rembrandt van Rijn, A Woman at Her Toilet, 1632/3, oil on canvas, 109.2 x 94.4 cm, National Gallery of Canada, Ottawa, inv. 6089, photo © National Gallery of Canada and as the woman (Esther?) in the Old Testament scene in Ottawa(fig 4).^[12]

In the eighteenth century, Young Girl in a Gold-Trimmed Cloak was part of the distinguished collection of Jean de Jullienne (1686–1766) in Paris, where it was considered a pendant to the Chapel Hill painting, which is likewise oval in shape and has exactly the same dimensions.^[13] The first mention of these paintings as pendants occurs in the Catalogue des Tableaux de M. de Jullienne, ca. 1756, a room-by-room inventory of the paintings displayed in Jullienne's Parisian hotel, illustrated with 152 miniatures in pen and watercolor.^[14] It is unlikely, however, that these works were conceived as pendants. Not only were they executed on different types of wood (the Leiden Collection painting is on Spanish cedar, whereas the Chapel Hill painting is on oak), they differ stylistically and qualitatively.^[15] Even though Rembrandt's pupil, presumably Isaac de Jouderville, must have had access to the same model, the physiognomic details of the Chapel Hill painting are softer and less vividly defined, and the lighting does not similarly set off the head and upper body from the background.^[16] Most importantly, she lacks the compelling presence that so endears her to all viewers of Rembrandt's subtle masterpiece in the Leiden Collection.

The journey of Young Girl in a Gold-Trimmed Cloak through to its accession by the Leiden Collection is extremely well documented and quite fascinating. Sold in Paris in 1767 after the death of Jean de Jullienne, the painting spent more than a century in France before Furst Johannes II, prince of Liechtenstein acquired it in 1893. Between 1908 and 1929 it was in the collection of the Rt. Reverend Georgius Schmid von Grunneck, the bishop of Chur in Switzerland. In 1929, Robert Treat Paine II, a descendant of one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, purchased the painting and then generously placed it on long-term loan at various museums so that it could be studied by scholars and enjoyed by a wide public. In 1975, however, Young Girl in a Gold-Trimmed Cloak was stolen from the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, and the brazen character of the theft brought the painting great notoriety. The theft had been orchestrated by Myles J. Connor Jr., who, wearing a beard, glasses, a tweed suit and a fedora, escaped with the work, aided by accomplices firing shots at the steps of the museum.^[17] A year later the painting was recovered in dramatic fashion by state and federal officials who returned it to the museum, where it stayed until the family put it up for auction in 1986. That sale (to a private collector) compounded the painting's fame because it sold for $10.5 million—a record for a work by the Dutch artist and the second highest price ever paid at auction for an Old Master painting.^[18] In 2007 this masterpiece was acquired in a private sale by the Leiden Collection (see Provenance).

-Volker Manuth

Endnotes

1. Reliably signed and dated paintings by Rembrandt of single figures that most likely originated in Amsterdam before 1632 are the Portrait of Nicolaes Ruts, Frick Collection, New York, inv. 43.1.150 (see Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project, A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings, vol. 2, 1631–1634, ed. Josua Bruyn et al. [Dordrecht, Boston, and Lancaster, 1986], no. A43), and the Portrait of a Man at a Writing Desk, The State Hermitage Museum, St. Petersburg, inv. 741 (see Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project, A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings, vol. 2, 1631–1634, ed. Josua Bruyn et al. [Dordrecht, Boston, and Lancaster, 1986], no. A44). Both are dated 1631.
2. See Émile Michel, Rembrandt, sa vie, son oeuvre et son temps (Paris, 1893), 560; see also Kurt Bauch, Rembrandt: Gemälde (Berlin, 1966), 24, no. 452 (as Saskia).
3. Saskia did not move from Friesland to Amsterdam until after her marriage to Rembrandt in 1634. For a biography of Saskia, see Ben Broos, Saskia de vrouw van Rembrandt (Zwolle, 2012), esp. 116–26.
4. This identification was suggested as early as 1883 by Wilhelm von Bode, Studien zur Geschichte der holländischen Malerei (Braunschweig, 1883), 598, no. 311. See also Eugène Dutuit, Tableaux et dessins de Rembrandt (Paris, 1885), 53, and Adolf Rosenberg, Rembrandt: Des Meisters Gemälde (Stuttgart and Leipzig, 1904), 26. The year of Lysbeth's birth is unknown, but there is information indicating that she was younger than Rembrandt. This can be deduced from the inventory of the estate of Rembrandt's mother, who was buried on 29 July 1640 in Leiden. The document (dated 2 November 1640) includes the names of her four living children, who are listed according to age. Elisabeth is mentioned at the end of this list, after her brothers Adriaen, Rembrandt, and Willem; see Walter L. Strauss and Marjon van der Meulen, The Rembrandt Documents (New York, 1979), 191, 1640/9.
5. See P. J. M. de Baer, De Leidse verwanten van Rembrandt van Rijn en hun Leidse afstammelingen tot heden (Leiden, 1992), 2.
6. Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project, A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings, vol. 2, 1631–1634, ed. Josua Bruyn et al. (Dordrecht, Boston, and Lancaster, 1986), 170; see also Dagmar Hirschfelder, Tronie und Porträt in der niederländischen Malerei des 17. Jahrhunderts (Berlin, 2008), 121–22; Franziska Gottwald, Das Tronie: Muster-Studie-Meisterwerk, die Genese einer Gattung der Malerei vom 15. Jahrhundert bis zu Rembrandt (Berlin, 2011).
7. In seventeenth-century inventories tronies are frequently described as foreign, outlandish, Turkish, or “antique,” a term that did not necessarily refer to classical antiquity but to the past in general. See Jaap van der Veen, “Faces from Life: Tronies and Portraits in Rembrandt's Painted Oeuvre," in Rembrandt: A Genius and His Impact, ed. Albert Blankert (Exh. cat. Melbourne, National Gallery of Victoria; Canberra, National Gallery of Australia) (Zwolle, 1997), 69–80.

8. For the painting in Stockholm, see Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project, A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings, vol. 2, 1631–1634, ed. Josua Bruyn et al. (Dordrecht, Boston, and Lancaster, 1986), A49; for the painting in a private collection in Switzerland, see Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project, A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings, vol. 2, 1631–1634, ed. Josua Bruyn et al. (Dordrecht, Boston, and Lancaster, 1986), C61, and vol. 4 (2005) (Corrigenda et addenda), 629–35.
9. As pointed out in Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project, A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings, vol. 2, 1631–1634, ed. Josua Bruyn et al. (Dordrecht, Boston, and Lancaster, 1986), 163, the depiction of the model in profile can be related to Rembrandt's Portrait of Amalia van Solms, also from 1632. The portrait is in Paris (Musée Jacquemaert-André, no. 423); see Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project, A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings, vol. 2, 1631–1634, ed. Josua Bruyn et al. (Dordrecht, Boston, and Lancaster, 1986), A61.
10. In 1986 the Rembrandt Research Project described this painting as an old imitation, but in 2005 it reversed this opinion and argued that the painting was autograph. See Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project, A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings, vol. 4, Self-Portraits, ed. Ernst van de Wetering (Dordrecht, 2005), Corrigenda et addenda, 635. The following summarized opinion appears in volume 2 (1986) of the Corpus (see C61): "An old imitation, probably done outside Rembrandt's circle" (p. 695).
11. For the painting in Chapel Hill (Morehead Planetarium, University of North Carolina), see Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project, A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings, vol. 2, 1631–1634, ed. Josua Bruyn et al. (Dordrecht, Boston, and Lancaster, 1986), C58.
12. Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project, A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings, vol. 2, 1631–1634, ed. Josua Bruyn et al. (Dordrecht, Boston, and Lancaster, 1986), A47 and A64.
13. See sale catalogue Jean de Jullienne, Paris (Remy), 30 March–22 May 1767 [Lugt 1603], lot 131. The sale catalogue describes them as being on "oval panels of identical dimensions" (59.4 x 43.2 cm).
14. See Andreas Henning, "Pastels in Jean de Jullienne's Collection as Recorded in the 1767 Sale Catalogue," in Jean de Jullienne: Collector and Connoisseur, ed. Christoph Martin Vogtherr and Jennifer Tonkovich (Exh. cat. London, Wallace Collection) (London, 2011), 58, 67, 139.
15. Whether or not these works were both originally painted as ovals or were later reshaped to turn them into pendants is not known.

16. Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project, A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings, vol. 2, 1631–1634, ed. Josua Bruyn et al. (Dordrecht, Boston, and Lancaster, 1986), 681.
17. Miles J. Connor, The Art of the Heist: Confessions of a Master Art Thief, Rock-and-Roller, and Prodigal Son (New York, 2009), 171–210; Anthony M. Amore and Tom Mashberg, Stealing Rembrandts: The Untold Stories of Notorious Art Heists (New York, 2011), 118–41.
18. The previous record price for an Old Master painting was set in 1985, when the J. Paul Getty Museum paid $11,700,000 for Mantegna's Adoration of the Magi (Christie's, London, April 18, 1985, lot 16). The previous auction record for a Rembrandt was set in 1961, when the Metropolitan Museum of Art paid $2,300,000 for Aristotle With a Bust of Homer (Parke-Bernet, New York, November 15, 1961, no. 7), the last great work by the artist to have come up at auction prior to Young Girl in a Gold-Trimmed Cloak.

Provenance

- Jean de Jullienne (1686–1766), Paris, by 1756 (his sale, Pierre Remy, Paris, 30 March–22 May 1767, no. 131, with Young Woman with a Necklace, now in Chapel Hill, N.C. [1,210 livres to Donjeux]).
- Duc de La Vallière (1708–80), (his sale, A. Paillet, Paris, 21 February 1781, no. 47, with Young Woman with a Necklace, now in Chapel Hill, N.C. [2,000 livres to Solier]).
- Marquis de Chamgrand / de Proth / Saint-Maurice / Bouillac (sale, A. J. Paillet, Paris, 20–24 March 1787, no. 25 [1,000 livres to Paillet]).
- Charles-René-Dominique Sochet Chevalier Destouches (1727–94), (his sale, A. J. Lebrun, Paris, 21 March 1794, no. 16 [651 francs to Basan]).
- Comte de Sommariva (his sale, Charles Paillet, Paris, 18–23 February 1839, no. 90 [5,100 francs to Géunin]).
- M. Valpinçon (his sale, Paris, Hôtel Drouot, 7–9 March 1881, no. 20 [8,450 francs to Charles Sedelmeyer, Paris; to E. Secrétan for 15,000 francs, by 1883]).
- E. Secrétan, by 1883 (his sale, Paris, Charles Sedelmeyer, 1–4 July 1889, no. 154 [29,500 francs to Charles Sedelmeyer]).
- Fürst Johannes II von Liechtenstein (1840–1929), Vienna, by 1893.
- The Rt. Rev. Georgius Schmid von Grüneck (bishop of Chur, Switzerland), by 1908; [to Robert C. Vose Gallery, Boston, 1929].
- Robert Treat Paine II (1861–1943), Boston, 1929; by descent to his son Richard Cushing Paine; by descent to his heirs, 30 April 1973; (sale, Sotheby's, London, 10 December 1986, no. 44).

- Private collection, 1986–2007; (private sale, Sotheby's, New York, 29 November 2007, no. 99).
- From whom acquired by the present owner in 2007.

Exhibition History

- Boston, Museum of Fine Arts, January 1930–February 1944, on loan with the permanent collection for several months a year [lent by Robert Treat Paine II, Boston].
- Worcester, Mass., Worcester Art Museum, "Rembrandt and His Circle: A Loan Exhibition of Paintings, Drawings, and Etchings," 4 February–1 March 1936, no. 3 [lent by Robert Treat Paine II, Boston].
- Boston, Museum of Fine Arts, "Art in New England: Paintings, Drawings, Prints from Private Collections in New England," 9 June–10 September 1939, no. 98 [lent by Robert Treat Paine II, Boston].
- Boston, Museum of Fine Arts, 7 July 1966–20 September 1986, on loan with the permanent collection [lent by Richard Cushing Paine; after 30 April 1973 by his heirs].
- Los Angeles, J. Paul Getty Museum, November 2007–October 2011, on loan with the permanent collection [lent by the present owner].
- Raleigh, North Carolina Museum of Art, "Rembrandt in America: Collecting and Connoisseurship," 30 October 2011–22 January 2012; Cleveland, Cleveland Museum of Art, 19 February–28 May 2012; Minneapolis, Minneapolis Institute of Arts, 24 June–16 September 2012, no. 12 [lent by the present owner].
- Budapest, Szépművészeti Múzeum, "Rembrandt and the Dutch Golden Age," 31 October 2014–15 February 2015, no. 95 [lent by the present owner].
- Los Angeles, J. Paul Getty Museum, February 2015–November 2016, on loan with the permanent collection [lent by the present owner].
- Paris, Musée du Louvre, "Masterpieces of The Leiden Collection: The Age of Rembrandt," 22 February–22 May 2017 [lent by the present owner].
- Beijing, National Museum of China, "Rembrandt and His Time: Masterpieces from The Leiden Collection," 17 June–3 September 2017 [lent by the present owner].

References

- Descamps, Jean-Baptiste. La vie des peintres flammands, allemands et hollandois. 4 vols. 1753–64, 2:97.
- Von Bode, Wilhelm. Studien zur Geschichte der holländischen Malerei. Braunschweig, 1883, 598, no. 311.
- Dutuit, Eugène. Tableaux et dessins de Rembrandt. Paris, 1885, 53, 66, no. 189.
- Von Würzbach, Alfred. Rembrandt-Galerie. 1886, no. 329.
- Bredius, Abraham. "Vom Kunstmarkt: Die holländischen Bilder der Vente Secrétan." Kunstchronik 24 (1889): 637.
- Michel, Émile. Rembrandt: Sa vie, son oeuvre et son temps. Paris, 1893, 560.
- Moes, E. W. Iconographia Batava. 2 vols. Amsterdam, 1897–1905, 1:308, under no. 6686, no. 10.
- Von Bode, Wilhelm and Hofstede de Groot, Cornelis. Rembrandt: Beschreibendes Verzeichniss seiner Gemälde mit den heliographischen Nachbildungen. 8 vols. Paris, 1897–1906, 1:28, 145–47, no. 57.
- Knackfuss, Hermann. Rembrandt. Translated by Campbell Dodgson. Leipzig, 1899, 18, fig. 19.
- Sedelmeyer, Charles. Illustrated Catalogue of 300 Paintings by Old Masters of the Dutch, Flemish, Italian, French, and English Schools: Being Some of the Principal Pictures Which Have at Various Times Formed Part of the Sedelmeyer Gallery. Paris, 1898, 138–39, no. 122.
- Höss, Karl. Fürst Johann II von Liechtenstein und die bildende Kunst. Vienna, 1908, 51.
- Valentiner, Wilhelm R. and Rosenberg, Adolf. Rembrandt: Des Meisters Gemälde. Stuttgart and Berlin, 1909, 56, 551.
- Hofstede de Groot, Cornelis. A Catalogue Raisonné of the Works of the Most Eminent Dutch Painters of the Seventeenth Century Based on the Work by John Smith. 8 vols. London, 1907–27, 6:32, no. 699. Translated from Beschreibendes und kritisches Verzeichnis der Werke der hervorragendsten holländischen Maler des XVII. Jahrhunderts. 10 vols. Esslingen and Paris, 1907–28.
- Van Dyke, John C. Rembrandt and His School: A Critical Study of the Master and His Pupils with a New Assignment of Their Pictures. New York, 1923, 25–27, 39, pl. 1, fig. 1.
- "A Rembrandt That Dr. Van Dyke Approves." In Art Digest 4 (November 1929): 9.
- Valentiner, Wilhelm R. "Important Rembrandts in American Collections." Art News 28 (26 April 1930): 31.
- Valentiner, Wilhelm R. Rembrandt Paintings in America. New York, 1931, no. 17, reproduced.

- Benesch, Otto. Rembrandt: Werk und Forschung. Vienna, 1935, 12.
- Bredius, Abraham. The Paintings of Rembrandt. London, 1937, 6, no. 89. Translated from Rembrandt Gemälde. Vienna, 1936.
- Rosenberg, Jakob. Rembrandt. 2 vols. Berlin, 1948, 1:9; 2: fig. 10. Revised edition, Rembrandt: Life and Work. London, 1968, 14, fig. 10.
- Bauch, Kurt. Rembrandt: Gemälde. Berlin, 1966, 24, no. 452.
- Gerson, Horst. Rembrandt Paintings. Amsterdam, 1968, 260, 494, no. 115.
- Bredius, Abraham. Rembrandt: The Complete Edition of the Paintings. Edited by Horst Gerson. London, 1969, 79, 554, no. 89.
- Arpino, Giovanni and Lecaldano, Paolo. The Complete Paintings of Rembrandt. New York, 1969, 98, no. 87.
- Benesch, Otto. Rembrandt: Werk und Forschung. Edited by Eva Benesch. Vienna, 1970, 12.
- Bolten, J. The Hidden Rembrandt. Oxford, 1977, 177, no. 114.
- Schwartz, Gary. Rembrandt: His Life, His Paintings. New York, 1985, 196, no. 209.
- Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project. A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings. Vol. 2, 1631–1634. Edited by Josua Bruyn et al. Dordrecht, Boston, and Lancaster, 1986, 5 n. 7, 59 n. 118, 85, fig. 38, 100, fig. 3, 164, 166–71, 682–83, no. A50.
- Tümpel, Christian. Rembrandt: All Paintings in Colour. Antwerp, 1993, 417, no. 227. Translated from Rembrandt: Mythos und Methode. Antwerp, 1986.
- Slatkes, Leonard J. Rembrandt: Catalogo completo dei dipinti. Florence, 1992, 427, no. 283.
- Wright, Christopher. Rembrandt. Paris, 2000, 302.
- Williams, Julia Lloyd, ed. Rembrandt's Women. Exh. cat. Edinburgh, National Gallery of Scotland; London, Royal Academy of Arts. Edinburgh, 2001, 88, under no. 19, fig. 87.
- Scallen, Catherine B. Rembrandt: Reputation and the Practice of Connoisseurship. Amsterdam, 2004, 297, 375 n. 53.
- Stichting Foundation Rembrandt Research Project. A Corpus of Rembrandt Paintings. Vol. 4, Self-Portraits. Edited by Ernst van de Wetering. Dordrecht, 2005, 629, 632, fig. 4.
- Korevaar, Gerben. In Rembrandt's Mother: Myth and Reality. Edited by Christiaan Vogelaar and Gerbrand Korevaar. Exh. cat. Leiden, Stedelijk Museum De Lakenhal. Zwolle, 2005, under no. 71, 221–24, fig. 157.
- Cavalli-Björkman, Görel. “Young Woman in Profile.” In Rembrandt? The Master and His Workshop. Edited by Lene Bøgh Rønberg and Eva de la Fuente Pedersen. Exh. cat. Copenhagen, Statens Museum for Kunst. Copenhagen, 2006, 180, under no. 6.
- Schwartz, Gary. The Rembrandt Book. New York, 2006, 50, fig. 71.

- Connor, Miles J. The Art of the Heist: Confessions of a Master Art Thief, Rock-and-Roller, and Prodigal Son. New York, 2009, 171–210.
- Woollett, Anne T. Rembrandt in Southern California. Los Angeles, 2009, 3, 34–35, no. 14.
- Tillerot, Isabelle. Jean de Jullienne et les collectionneurs de son temps: Un regard singulier sur le tableau. Paris, 2010, 209, 226, 233–34, fig. 85, pl. xxix, 408–9, no. 324.
- Amore, Anthony M. and Mashberg, Tom. Stealing Rembrandts: The Untold Stories of Notorious Art Heists. New York, 2011, 118–41.
- Vogtherr, Christoph Martin and Tonkovich, Jennifer, eds. Jean de Jullienne: Collector and Connoisseur. Exh. cat. London, Wallace Collection. London, 2011, 67, under no. 1, 139.
- Rassieur, Tom. “Rembrandt in the Seventeenth Century.” In Rembrandt in America: Collecting and Connoisseurship. Edited by George S. Keyes, Tom Rassieur, and Dennis P. Weller. Exh. cat. Raleigh, North Carolina Museum of Art; Cleveland, Cleveland Museum of Art; Minneapolis, Minneapolis Institute of Arts. New York, 2011, 40, pl. 5, 42.
- Raisseur, Tom. “Rembrandt’s Leiden Years: Mastering His Craft and Defining His Genius.” In Rembrandt in America: Collecting and Connoisseurship. Edited by George S. Keyes, Tom Rassieur, and Dennis P. Weller. Exh. cat. Raleigh, North Carolina Museum of Art; Cleveland, Cleveland Museum of Art; Minneapolis, Minneapolis Institute of Arts. New York, 2011, 104–6, 108.
- Manuth, Volker. “Young Girl Wearing a Gold-trimmed Cloak.” In Rembrandt and the Dutch Golden Age. Edited by Ildikó Ember. Exh. cat. Budapest, Szépművészeti Múzeum. Budapest, 2014, 356–57, no. 95.

Versions

Versions and Copies

1. J. F. Grueber (possibly Johann Friedrich Gruber, d. 1681), whereabouts unknown (formerly or still in the Chauveau Collection, Paris).

Versions Notes

Technical Summary

The support is a single plank of vertically grained, oval-shaped Spanish cedar.^[1] The slightly irregular shape of the oval and small losses along the outer edges of the paint suggest the panel may have been trimmed just slightly after the paint dried, but also opens the possibility that the support was originally rectangular even if the composition was oval. The panel is unthinned and uncradled and has no bevels. Remnants of eight straight pieces of old paper tape create a hexagonal border along the outer edge of the oval panel reverse. Small black dots of resin or gum exude from and stain the panel reverse along the cedar's pores. Five red wax seals, two white wax drips each with a horizontal thread embedded across them, one import stamp, three paper labels, and a numerical inscription are located along the panel reverse but there are no stencils, panel maker's marks or machine tool marks. Two narrow parallel bands of adhesive residue above and below the two white drips and four pinholes along the ends of both strips suggest a rectangular label of some sort had previously been adhered to the panel reverse. An additional short white string is embedded and connects the two red wax seals below the white wax dots.

A light-colored ground has been thinly and evenly applied followed by a pale brown imprimatura. The paint has been built up in successive thin layers and smoothly applied with lively brushwork through the background and with thicker paint, with some use of impasto through the figure's white shirt, flesh tones, and gold brocade trim. A granularity along some paint passages and pinpoint losses through others could benefit from further investigation. There is evidence of a now missing brush hair between the figure's eyes and a fiber of unknown origin caught in the paint along the lower part of figure's dress.

Infrared images captured at 900–1700 nanometers reveal lines of preparatory drawing, and compositional changes visible in the images include a slight shift in the position of the face around the chin and proper left eye.

The painting is signed and dated in dark paint along the background, center right.

The painting has not undergone conservation treatment since its acquisition in 2007 and remains in a good state of preservation.^[2]

Technical Summary Endnotes

1. The characterization of the wood is based on Regis B. Miller's June 2012 wood identification report. The panel thickness was not measured.
2. Entry based on an examination report prepared by Yvonne Szafran, head of paintings conservation, J. Paul Getty Museum, Los Angeles, 2011.